Racing Queensland (RQ) advises that it has adopted amendments to the Rules of Racing, Greyhound, constituted by the Greyhounds Australasia Rules and the Queensland Local Rules of Racing - Greyhound, as detailed below:

- Amended GAR 32: Appointment and duties of marking and microchipping officials; and
- Amended GAR 33: Greyhound to be microchipped.

The amended GAR 32 and GAR 33 will take effect from November 1, 2024, as advised by Greyhounds Australasia (GA), meaning the requirement to ear tattoo greyhounds will cease from that date.

Details of the amended rules in the form of GA's previous consultation documentation is attached. An updated Rule Book to reflect the rule changes will be published by RQ closer to the effective date after receipt of same from GA.

AMENDMENT TO GREYHOUNDS AUSTRALASIA RULES

TERMINATION OF EAR TATTOO (BRAND)

Summary:

The reliable identification of greyhounds is a fundamental integrity measure underpinning the sport of greyhound racing, and the tattooing (branding) of an ear with a unique registration code, is currently compulsory in all Greyhounds Australasia (GA) jurisdictions, with the exception of New Zealand.

In late 2022, Greyhound Racing New Zealand announced the introduction of Local Rules which removed the requirement for the mandatory ear tattoo in all NZ-registered greyhounds, with the practice ceased from 1 February 2023.

Concurrently, the GA Board sought to assess the phase-out of the ear tattoo and designated a working group to review all current methods of greyhound identification and assess their suitability, effectiveness, and associated risks.

The working group noted that advancement and access to technology have improved techniques for the identification of individual animals, and so has the reliability of identification methods employed by and available to the greyhound industry.

Following the review by the working group and consultation between Controlling Bodies, the GA Board has determined that by 1 July 2024, the requirement for ear tattooing of registered greyhounds will cease.

This change will see all jurisdictions move to the microchip as the primary method of identification, with integration of alternative identification measures as tools for secondary identification to be implemented by each responsible Controlling Body.

In preparation for the termination of the ear tattooing of greyhounds and the removal of the ear tattoo as a source of identification within the GA Rules (GARs), the first phase of amended GA Rules has been provided for external consultation with the amended rules to remove all reference to ear tattoos.

Termination of Greyhound Ear Tattoo - FAQs

Q. When will the need for greyhound pups to have an ear tattoo cease?

- A. It is intended that by 1 July 2024, the requirement for an ear tattoo to be applied as part of the identification process for greyhound pups will cease. Current identification methods of microchipping and marking will continue to occur.

Q. What methods will replace the ear tattoo for the identification of greyhound pups?

- A. The microchip will remain as the primary identifier for registered greyhounds. Several alternate identification methods are currently being advanced by Controlling Bodies to replace the ear tattoo.

Q. What happens if the microchip cannot be located or read by the scanner?

- A. Each greyhound pup will continue to be provided with a unique registration code (currently the ear tattoo/brand) that will sit within the greyhound's digital profile and remain uniquely attributed to that greyhound for life.

If the microchip cannot be located or read, then a replacement microchip will need to be inserted and a DNA sample may be taken to verify the greyhound's identity.

Controlling Bodies are currently addressing the implementation of alternate methods of identification, which would be available to operate if the microchip cannot be found. It is intended that these measures will be incorporated into the race day procedures at a jurisdiction-by-jurisdiction level.
